

Creative writer at Beyond Violence (unpaid)

You have experience or enthusiasm for writing blogs? You have a passion for combating violence in the world bit by bit as part of a global movement? Then Beyond Violence is precisely the organisation you will be interested in!

Beyond Violence is centered around a web platform which seeks to engage people across countries and continents in the promotion of non-violent conflict transformation. Through online petitions, forum discussions, digital conferences, and many more ways we are impacting decision makers and key local actors to put down weapons and solve conflict through negotiation and dialogue.

Your responsibilities

- Discussing your topics with the blog team leader.
- Managing your time sufficiently to contribute 2 blogs per month.

Our requirements

- Knowledge of international conflict coverage and an interest in conflict resolution.

We would love to hear especially from those residing in conflict ridden regions.

- Good written knowledge of English.

However, the blog is peer reviewed to allow those with a lower command of English to participate in blog writing.

What we offer

- An informal structure and freedom to complete tasks in your own style.
- Being part of an innovative and quickly expanding movement - be part of creating change.
- Flexible working hours – as an unpaid position we expect you to only contribute the time you are able and willing to.
- Cooperation with inspiring and engaging activists and campaigners from all over the world
- Experience in building up a non-profit organisation in a relaxed, cooperative, and intercultural work environment.
- Opportunity to get publish your blogs on an established online platform.
- Letter of recommendation or reference for your future employer.

We look forward for your application
